

Home Education

A healthy natural alternative to mainstream schooling

Join millions of families throughout the world providing their children with a wonderful experience in a natural learning environment

- Home Education allows children to direct their own learning making it a joyous experience so they quickly learn more, usually far exceeding what is learnt in schools and without the need for stars, stamps and 'Very Good' rewards.
- Home Educated children are not limited to socialising with the same group of peers each year isolated from functioning communities; they can socialise with people of all ages from various walks of life in all types of natural settings, enabling them to develop exceptionally advanced communication and social skills.
- Teaching qualifications aren't required because parents are the best facilitators of learning just as they have been through the first five years of their children's lives, a time when children learn more than any other time during their development.

Home Education is providing children with a range of connections within their communities and various resources, then getting out of the way and trusting they will naturally and extensively learn, and they do.

Home education is how to learn so it's learning for life. It's cooperative learning so knowledge is shared. It's learning together and the world is the classroom.
